But it is very attractive to looser thinkers, and convenient to popular writers or speakers who have their special purposes to serve. Existing laws or moral rules may, indeed, be unjust, i.e. may not be for general benefit, but, when they have received the general approval and adoption of mankind, or of the citizens of a State, it is reasonable to presume that there have been good grounds for their approval, and it is desirable to look with some suspicion upon those who declaim against them, and not to be led away by phrases unsupported by demonstration. This is preeminently the case where there is a special object to be advocated, or where, as so frequently is found with Continental writers, there is evidently an animosity against a particular nation. It is discreditable to many politicians and public men that they frequently...
