He has been connected with this College in the capacity of tutor, professor, and president, in all, seventeen years. He died full of years and honors; and at his funeral in the Chapel, the great interests of a great country were represented in her eminent sons, paying the last tribute of respect to one who had done much in behalf of those interests. V-P , . TO. They tell me when the solemn hour Was nigh; when coursed the blood with feeble pace, Beneath the fell destroyers power, --A smile came oer thy face. And when the chilly hand of Death Was on thy brow, and lifes last feeble rill Was frozen with his icy breath, That sweet smile lingered still. As when the sunlight quits the...
